

Wanted, A Young Lady - A Farce in One Act

Excerpt from the opening pages: SIMON. Why, when master and missus went away this morning, they said they were going on a visit, and should be away nine or ten days and the same number of nights too, no doubt. FRANK. (aside) Pleasant information! all this distance from London, and not a shilling in my pocket. (to SIMON) Are you alone here? SIMON. Yes, I'm quite alone in the house, except my godfather, who lives at the bottom of the garden. FRANK. The surly old brute I met in the park? SIMON. Yes, that's godfather. FRANK. Agreeable society! Well, I must teach myself resignation. (offering portmanteau) Go and prepare a chamber for me. SIMON. You are labouring under a mistake, sir; the Golden Lion is on the other side. FRANK. Ah, true! you do not know me. I am Fra (checking himself) No, I mean Harry Mitchell, your master's grandson. This edition is a reprint of a play published long ago in London.
